To Whom It May Concern,

It is my opinion as a resident of Nevada since 1959 that Nevada should not be the dumping ground for our nation's nuclear waste. This state does not produce nuclear waste, the states which do should handle their own garbage. These other states created their own situations and should be responsible for cleaning up thier own messes. Are we due to receive any special benefits from the federal government for accepting the potential liabilities which may befall us for housing this extremely dangerous material? Is there some kind of worthwhile payoff for taking on the nation's most controversial trash?
